Stanzas.

Cease my heart, oh! cease thy longing Towards joys thou should t not love; But oh! turn where joys are thronging, Ever round thy home above.

Cease my heart, oh! cease thy beating; All of earth must know decay; Mourn not rainbow glories fleeting, Which but charm, then fade away.

Cease my heart, oh! cease thy dreaming, Visions fled, may not return; Love not, love not, things but seeming, Which a manly heart should spurn.

Cease my heart, oh! cease thy shrinking From the cares thou wouldst allay; Up! though fortune's tide in sinking Thrice loved treasures bear away. PROPAGANDA, ROME, 1854.

For the Post. What is the Cause of the War Between Russia and Turkey?

herself-though, if she don't mind she may get the fingers of old Mrs. France and Mrs. England in her hair and eyes, = for her impertinent temper. Russia, however, contends that this is a matter with which no body else has any right to meddle but herself, as she is the head and mistress of the Oriental Church; she claims the exclusive right to protect those of her own faith, wherever found. But these other old ladies, think it is enough for Russia, that her religion (and precious little I am afraid the old lady has got.) is tolerated and protected by the Porte .-But Russia thinks differently, and insists upon her rights. And so, at it they go. Who is in the right, events will determine; for "might gives right." This is the answer to "the Eastern question."

But if we would find one true secret of utes. this difficulty, we must look back of all Khan of Tartary, as here inasmuch as nothis. The Russians have for a long time, harbored sevenge against Turkey, because the Greek Church suffered terribly, and for a long time, under the oppressive like." tyranny of the Tartars; who, led on by Tamarlane and others, laid waste the fairest portion of Russia, and took, and held possession of the three Capitols,-Kief, Kazan, and Moscow. Hence the Russians, those especially whose affinities are for the Greek Church, think that it will be the fulfilling of their high calling it up to Leverett street. of heaven to exterminate every Mohamedan from the face of the earth. Here lies the core of the matter. Russia frowns' upon all efforts at a compromise. Turkey has tried to avoid the fight, because she knew that, so weak and timid a fowl as she, is no match for the ferocious strength of the Polar Bear. But Russia has been all the while trying to provoke a difficulty, like the wolf did, in the fable, with the lamb, who tried, in the first place, to pick a quarrel with the lamb, that he might, in the second place, have good reason to pick his bones. If they get fairly at it, there is no telling what the end will be. But it will require no prophet to tell us that if France and England pitch into the arena, that it will make bloody work of it. S.
